Henry C. Payne, vice chairman of the Republican central national committee, said: "My acquaintance with Senator Sherman has extended over a period of thirty years and he possessed my highest respect and regard. His career has been a credit to himself and to his country. He was one of the statesmen who have accomplished something in the way of legislation which has made and will continued to make a strong impression on the welfare of the country. His passing away removes one of the statesmen of what may be called the war period and there are not many left."

Senator James K. Jones, chairman of the Democratic national committee, said: "For many years I regarded Mr. Sherman as the wisest Republican in public life. He was a man of great sagacity and foresight and has impressed his personality as much upon the government in the last forty years as any other man who has been before the public."

Ex-Comptroller of the Treasury James H. Eckles said: "I regret to learn that Benator Sherman has passed away. I knew him intimately in Washington. I do not know of any one who could have been more graclous in his own home and more entertaining in conversation."

He became prominent in public life as far back as the fifties, when he was a member of the congressional committee that visited Kansas to investigate the troubles then prevailing there. He helped form the Republican party and throughout his long career was one of the most trusted and able leaders. His impression is on all of the great measures enacted into lugislation and carried into the constitution during and after the civil war. Perhaps his crowning work was as secretary of the treasury under President Hayes, when he carried to successful issue the act providing for the resumption of specie payments. In great measure we owe to his firmness and courage the high credit of our country abroad, and the sound condition of its finances at home. THE NEWS IN LONDON.

London, Oct. 22.—The news of the death of ex-Secretary Sherman reached here too late for most of the afternoon newspapers. The Pall Mall Gazette thinks that "while the result of his secretaryship in President McKinley's administration showed Mr. Sherman had outlived his usefulness his services to his security for the preceding forty years were great and will be remembered with gratitude."

Interwoven with the great events of that epoch. As his illustrious brother, William Tecumseh, shared with Grant and Sheridan the highest place among the military heroes of the generation, so, too, John Sherman stood in civic life along with Seward, Sumner, Evarts, Blaine and that coterie of intellectual giants of war and reconstruction days. Always a leader, twice a member of the cabinet, first as head of the treasury and then of state affairs, three times a candidate for the Republican nomination for the presidency and for years one of the great creative forces in congress his name was identified with the laws, the law-making and the political struggles which engaged attention for almost half a century. Few men had more continuous public service in such a diversity

HE WAS A GREAT MAN.
Canton, G., Oct. 12.—Judge Wm. R. Day, who succeeded the late John Sherman as secretary of state, in speaking of his death said:

"In the disath of Secretary Sherman the country has lost one of its greatest statesmen and notable figures. Mr. Sherman has been continuously in national affairs for a greater length of time than any American now living. He became reproducent in public life as far hack as scring chairman during the inquiry and section of the presidency.

Again in 1829, three years after the birth of his brother William Tecumseh. They came of sturdy ancestors, tracing their lineage back to Roger Sherman, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, to the Shermans who came over shortly after the leaning of the Pilgrims. The father was a lawyer of prominence of Ohio who rose in later life to be judge of the surpreme court. When he lied in 1829 the large family of boys were left with scant support and were adopted by friends and relatives. William went with Thomas Ewing, who shaped his career as a solder with John went with an older brother, Charles, at Mansfield and took up the study of isw, which, in turn took him into the field of politics and public life. His first public service was in 1848 when he

About this time Saimon P. Chase resigned his seat as senator from Ohlo and Sherman was elected to his place, entering the senate for the first time on March 4, 1861. His congressional fame had preceded him and he at once took the same rank in the upper branch as he had had in the lower. His service was continuous until 1873, most of the time as chairman of the finance committee in which position he wrote many of those far-reaching measures of finance with which he was identified. The suspension of specie payment occurred in 1862, necessitating the lesue of United States notes. He largely carried this measure through, and was also the defender of the legal tender features of these notes, which excited wide differences in and out of congress. Following this he devised the plan for the resuming of specie payment and practically framed the bill by which resumption was to occur on January 1, 1879. When Hayes became president Sherman entered the treasury and there as to execut the plan of specie payment which he had previously placed on the statut books. His first move was to be some the plan of specie payment which he had previously placed on the statut books. His first move was to be some he had an opportunity to execute the plan of specie payment which he had previously placed on the statut books. His first move was to be shown that before that time he had accumulation of great stocks of gold with which to pay specie for payer when January 1, 1879, arrived. The Grand Old Man of America was one of the richest in the world. This was accounted for by himself as "luck"; but his friends say he had amassed his wealth by actual saving. A close business friend of the family says that the old gentleman had part of the first money he ever earned. For sixty years he had been saving a little all the time and the result is riches; he patronized savings banks and invested in small but lucrative ways. He never put a dollar down without picking two up.

As congressman and chairman of the committee of ways and means of the house, as senator and chairman of the finance committee of the senate, and as secretary of the treasury during some of the most trying times in the financial history of the country. New York, Oct. 22.—The Republican sound money parade of November 3 will be a floral exhibit as well as a parade in the interest of the Republican presidential nomines. The carnation pink has been adopted as an emblem of the paraders, who, in addition to wearing the natural pack, will wear buttons with a pictured pink and the motto: "We will bloom again for McKinley and Roosevelt." They have given orders to local florists to bring to the city 200,000 carnation pinks for the occasion.

A Broadway florist, who has an order for 100,000, said today:

"It is perfectly easy to gather in 200,000 pinks for this occasion. We place our orders with the producers of pinks in all the country round about, and bring thousands from as far west as Wisconsin. The growers gather the flowers when they reach perfection, put them in cold storage, and deliver them on the morning when they are wanted.

"The price will average $50 a thousand."

"Some will probably cost $1 apiece."

Gage, Root, Long and Hay, Attorney General Griggs.

Secretary Root, and Gen, Leonard Wood had an interview with the president before the meeting. The cabinet meeting was devoted largely to action on the death of ex-Secretary of State Sherman, and the president directed Secretary of State Hay to prepare a formal announcement of the death for the official information of the diplomatic service, as is customary in such cases.

The meeting also considered the subject of the Cuban constitutional convention and it was said that General Wood brought with him some interesting information on this subject which was laid before the cabinet by the president. In addition to this there were a number of matters relating to national politics that the president wished to discuss with his advisers before leaving tonight for Ohio, where he will remain till the night of election day.

At the conclusion of the meeting it was stated that the agreement between England and Germany as to their future policy in China is specially satisfactory to this government, particularly as it is a recognition of the unrefules laid down to this government, particularly as it is a recognition of the principles laid down in the Hay note July 3, regarding the open door in China and the maintenance of the integrity of the empire.

He had returned to the senate in 1831, serving continuously until 1897 when he resigned to enter the cabinet of President McKinley as secretary of state. His resignation from that body occurred soon after the declaration of war with Spain and he returned to private life after 45 years of almost continuous public service. Since then he ams done some illerary work, carrying forward his memoirs from the period of his former book.

No one in Kansas goes Sockless-even Jerry Simpson does not now. For "The Man With the Hoe" we have Hose at 5c a pair—and we have them at 15c and 19c a pair—and at 25c a pair we have Hose that the young fellow who wears them, when he gets on a street car and pulls up his pants to keep them from bagging at the knees, will be proud to show.

No one goes Shoeless in Kansas-Shoes are now made so cheap and strong. A man called on us a few days since, who had on a pair which he said he had worn continuously for eighteen months, he had purchased them from us and paid $1.00 for them. He bought another pair at $1.50, which he thought would last him until he was compelled to climb the Golden Stairs. This is a fact.

Using that word-Fact-reminds us of a story. A Farmer had two dogs, one a full grown St. Bernards, the other a feist, when any one passed along the road the St. Bernard would run out and bark "Bow-wow-wow, some one is coming"—the feist would glide out on three legs and yelp "It's a fact bygosh-fact-fact-fact."

If any of our Shoes prove defective or rip, we have them repaired at our cost—that is one reason why we have so large a shoe trade—we try to do the right thing.

Notwithstanding the recent advance in Staple Dry Goods we are still selling at the old prices and propose to do so until compelled to replenish our stock.

Ladies', if you haven't bought that Winter Hat yet, drop into our Millinery Department at the rear end of store, and interview our little milliner, Miss Renyer, she can please the most fastidious, and can sell you something chic and for less money than you can purchase elsewhere.

Our Millinery Department is a good place to take a rest. While out shopping drop in and take a rocker-you are welcome.

New York, Oct. 22.—The strength of the market is a surprise to everyone, but especially to the big bulls who sold out about the middle of last week. When these interests disposed of their holdings, it was considered a foregone conclusion that stocks would experience a sharp set-back. But in spite of the withdrawal of Wormser and his associates, the market continued its advance, and has in fact made more rapid strides than when they were at the belm. Outsiders are buying stocks for many months and if this buying movement develops in proportions, which the more sanguishe traders anticipate, a sensational rise is likely to occur during the next couple of weeks. It is claimed by the friends of the sold-out buils, that stocks are passing this weak hands and that a sudden collapse of the upward movement is only a question of a few days. Representatives of the leading commission houses report a substantial increase in the outside demand for stocks and people who are buying them are fully prepared to take care of them. One house received an order Saturday to buy five thousand shares of different dividend paying stocks from a client who had not made a trade since the early part of one house received an order Saturday to buy five thousand shares of different dividend paying stocks from a client who had not made a trade since the early part of last summer. It is encouraging to be able to note this awakening of the outside public. It reflects returning confidence and insures a higher level of values. Unless something unexpected occurs to turn the market from its present course. As there seems to be no doubt in the minds of Wall street people in regard to the outcome of the election, and as it is generally conceded that the re-election of McKinlev will stimulate business and insure a continuance of the prosperity which the country is now enjoying, it would be strange if the stock market did not have a fair-sized boom. Just at the moment sentiment is decidedly builth and this week will in all probability witness considerable new business of a vigorous character. European speculators have not, as yet, shown any pronounced disposition to buy our securities. This is no doubt is due to the fact that more uncertainty exists abroad over the result of the election than on this side. If foreigners tell success of McKinley's election, they would be liberal buyers. Holdings of American securities in Europe are insignificant compared with what they were a couple of years ago. The strength in the stock suggests manipulation. There is a movement on foot to make them sell higher in order to make a market for insiders to sell. People who make a specialty of this class of stocks predict a big advance in prices in the event of McKinley's election, Morgan is said to be furnishing the buying power in Northern Pacific, common, and Southern Pacific, in the face of the constantly decreasing carnings. There is considerable havestment buying of Atchison common. As has fully been stated in these notes there this is one of the most promising low-priced stocks and those who can afford to carry it should buy for a long pull. If, as seems to be the general impression, we are to have a genuine bull market, the Grangers wi
